Prison Mutiny Subdued After Six Are Wounded

OUTBREAK IN WAKE OF WILD DISORDER THROUGHOUT NIGHT

Taunts of Women Are Blamed For Fury Of The Inmates

KEEPERS FLEE TO THE TOWERS

Sheriff's Posse Fires On Prisoners In The Corridors

MEDIA, Pa., Oct. 13.—(AP)—A mutiny among prisoners in the Delaware county jail was subdued today after six of the prisoners had been shot by hastily deputized residents and police.

The outbreak followed a night of wild disorder, authorities said. There were 196 men and women crowded into the 65 cells of the jail. Among them were 20 young negro women recently had been sent to the prison from the Sleigh-ton farm for incorrigibles where they were alleged to have attempted to start a mutiny.

This, Dr. D. Marshall Harvey, chairman of the prison board, said was one of the causes of today's disorder.

The women, shouting, cursing the men prisoners had roused them, the officials said to a point of savage fury. Many of the men inmates were negroes and they answered the women taunt for taunt. Throughout the night the five keepers were kept busy, going from cell to cell, trying to quell the fight and disturbances among the groups locked in.

When breakfast was taken to the prisoners about 8 a. m., the seven trustees, most of whom were short-time prisoners, rushed from their cells and before the guards could draw their pistols had taken possession of the jail.

Arming themselves with iron bars, the seven men ran madly up and down the first and second tiers of cells, smashing the locks and liberating the other prisoners.

Fleeing from the cell corridor, the five keepers locked the doors behind them and took up posts at the watch towers on top of the 25 foot wall that surrounds the small jail yard.

Finding their exit cut off, the prisoners milled around in the jail, fighting among themselves and venting their fury on the interior of the structure.

Meantime the keepers had notified the warden and he, in turn, asked help of the sheriff. Citizens and state police were quickly summoned and, armed with shotguns, obtained from the prison offices.

Throwing the doors of the prison open, the officers and nearly 100 citizens were met by the mad-dened inmates, who tried to break through. Blackjacks met lead pipe in the reign of falling blows. Heads were cracked and men borne down. Little by little the prisoners were forced back into the jail but they fell back to reorganize their broken lines and then rushed again. This time they were met with a fusillade of bullets from pistols and shot-guns.

Under orders from the sheriff, the shots were fired low, so as to not seriously wound anyone. After six of the prisoners had fallen, the others retreated and soon were in their cells.

Scores of primitive weapons were found on the premises.

D. P. DAVIS, NOTED REALTOR, IS LOST OVER SHIP'S SIDE

Majestic Passenger Is Drowned On Way To Europe

CLERK ROSE TO LEADING PLACE

Won Fame and Riches In Development Projects

TAMPA, Fla., Oct. 13.—(AP)—D. P. Davis, developer of Davis island here, and one of the best known real estate men in Florida, was drowned while enroute to Europe aboard the steamer Majestic, of the White Star line, said a radiogram received here today by Arthur Y. Mylam, vice president of the D. P. Davis properties.

The radiogram announcing Mr. Davis' death said: "Dave lost overboard early this morning. Ship circled over hour. Everything possible done. No hope. Advise family."

It was signed by Raymond Schilder and E. P. Montli Montaine, employees of the D. P. Davis organization. They sailed from New York with Mr. Davis last Saturday Mr. Mylam said.

Starting his business career as a clerk in a hardware store here, Mr. Davis soon saw the possibilities in Florida real estate and was eminently successful in this venture. After developing several large projects along the east coast, including the Alta Vista sub-division, he went to Europe in 1925 and obtained from the city commission all rights to three islands at the mouth of the Hillsboro river in Tampa bay.

These islands were undeveloped pieces of land, thickly studded with vegetation. Davis immediately set to work with a fleet of dredges and hundreds of workmen and the first of the islands was cleared within a few months. A boulevard and paved road were built, homes sprung up and contracts were let for half a dozen hotels. Three of which have been constructed.

Stone and Webster, of Boston, who took over the development of Davis island, have been pushing the development to completion. Within three hours after Davis placed the islands on sale in Tampa more than $1,000,000 was invested. Just before relinquishing his active interest in Davis island, Davis undertook the development of a large real estate project at St. Augustine, known as Anacasia islands. He also was interested in development projects in Texas and California.

Mr. Davis was 41 years old and a native of Florida.

After More Than Half Century of Service As Block Dispatcher Here Vickroy Reaches 'Life's Terminal'

Joe Vickroy, who had seen the antiquated locomotives of a by-gone day succeeded by the rail moguls of the present, who has seen the old wooden coaches of the slow moving accommodations give way to the crack all-pullmans of the modern times, has sent hurtling through space his last train.

Mr. Vickroy died this morning about 7:50 at his residence in West Decatur. He had been in ill health sometime, but he suffered a stroke Sunday evening from which he never rallied.

For more than a half century, Mr. Vickroy was block dispatcher at the union station here for the Southern and Louisville and Nashville railroads. Functioning in command of this highly important railroad junction point, throughout the years, he handled the details of his office in such a manner as to win the highest praise from his superior officers.

Night and day, seven days a week, the clicking telegraph instruments here detail their story of train movements and train orders. To the shoulders of the crew of dispatchers falls the terrifying responsibility of keeping these records straight to the most minute detail.

Over a period of 52 years, lacking but six weeks Joe Vickroy did his full share at the local office in insuring the safety of untold thousands of passengers, who went their crashing way through space, obliterating distance, unmindful of the part he played in their safe journey on missions of happiness and sorrow.

Mr. Vickroy was about 74 years of age. He came here in 1872, when he was but a youth and here he remained a life time, his talented fingers and his active brain ever alert to secure the lives of those who had entrusted their safety to the fast-moving coaches of the Southern and the Ellens.

Through good years and lean ones he carried on, his fidelity to duty always an inspiration to those with whom he came in contact. The exactness of his work, together with its confinement, were not conducive to the making of a large circle of friends, but it was a tribute to his high character that those who knew him best esteemed him most.

The trains today still shoot past the signal house at the union station but the familiar figure of Mr. Vickroy is absent—he has reached the terminal of life to which, all in time, must follow, and there, no doubt, he received the Divine blessing "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," from the Director of All Things.

Funeral services will be conducted from the residence at 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon by Rev. R. T. Tyler and Rev. J. D. Wallace. Interment will be made here, Brown directing.

NECKTIE CLUE FOR PROBERS

Death Dealing Pistol Found Near Scene Of The Murder

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Detective Sergeant Arthur B. Scrivener, 36 years old, and regarded as the most efficient operative in the Washington department, was "the happiest man in the world," he told newspaper men at police headquarters early today because of his impending marriage this afternoon to Miss Helen Barnes Parker of McLean, Va.

It was the culmination of a romance of years. The engagement had been kept secret until last night.

But there will be no wedding. For 30 minutes after he had characterized himself as "the happiest man" and just as he was turning into his home, he was shot and killed by an unknown assailant, who escaped in the darkness.

Only one bullet was fired. It entered the detective's heart, killing him instantly before he could draw his own pistol, but not before he had grasped the necktie of the man who shot him. A short distance away, apparently dropped in haste, was found the pistol from which the bullet had been fired.

Neighbors hearing the shot and the footsteps of a fleeing person, called police headquarters. The first thought of officers ordered to the neighborhood was to awaken Sergeant Scrivener and enlist his aid in discovering the origin of the disturbance. They went to his home and were directed by aroused neighbors to the body of their fellow officers.

The necktie clutched in his hand and the pistol nearby are their only clues to the identity of the slayer. They said they were at a loss for a motive.

Sergeant Scrivener was recognized as the "crack" detective of the force. One of his most noted exploits was the capture, single-handed and after a running pistol fight, of Thurman Brown, negro prisoner, who had escaped from Atlanta penitentiary in 1920. The negro emptied his gun before he was subdued. Sergeant Scrivener had been in the department 14 years, nine years of which were spent as a detective.

RUSSELL T. SCOTT GRANTED APPEAL IN HIGHEST COURT

Time Too Brief For A Review Of Case, Court Insists

ANOTHER STAY FOR PRISONER

Third Narrow Escape For Alleged Slayer

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 13.—(AP)—Russell T. Scott under sentence to hang in Chicago on Friday, for the murder of a drug clerk, during a hold-up, was granted an appeal by the Illinois supreme court today.

Scott, who twice before had escaped the gallows, by a narrow margin, had filed a writ of error with the court on Monday. It was an appeal from a sanity trial, in which the jury found him sane and subject to hanging, the sentence originally imposed.

He had been returned to Chicago from the asylum for the criminal insane at Chester, where he was sent after a previous eleventh hour insanity plea. He first escaped the noose through a reprieve from Governor Small.

Chief Justice Stone, in announcing the court's decision, said that the appeal was granted because the time before the date set for the hanging was too brief for a review of the case. The action will bring the case up from the Cook county court in an orderly manner and after presentation of briefs and possibly oral arguments it will be taken under advisement for a final decision.

CORN CROP VIEWED AS A LIFE SAVER

Marketing Begins In Next Three Weeks Over Morgan

With the best corn crop in years as an outlook, Morgan farmers are turning to the prospect of a rise in the corn market as a life-saver from the dropping cotton price. Acreage in corn this year has not been estimated.

It is stated here that it is hardly probable that the corn market for 1926 crop will open within the next three weeks, weather conditions prevailing at this time are keeping farmers from gathering the harvest.

It is further stated by farmers that with the condition of the corn crop in other sections of the nation understood to be poor, that a rise in the bushel price is expected.

REPORT EXPECTED DURING AFTERNOON IN MEMPHIS MEET

Mrs. W. B. Edmundson Representative Of Alabama

500 ATTENDING CONFERENCE

Plea For Increase In Use of Cotton Is Also Demanded

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 13.—Scores of plans for relieving the emergency situation created by cotton market depression, were submitted to a committee on resolutions today by the South-wide conference, meeting here to consider measures for financing the present bountiful crop and assuring an acreage reduction for 1927.

The conference, numbering perhaps 500 representatives from cotton growing states, including planters, bankers and merchants, recessed to reassemble at two o'clock to hear the resolutions which the committee should present.

The resolutions committee embraced three departments, which were instructed to consider three phases of the problem, namely:

Marketing the present crop in an orderly manner; financial credit and acreage reduction in subsequent seasons; elected as permanent chairman of the conference C. P. J. Mooney, editor of the Memphis Commercial Appeal expressed the opinion that conditions were not as serious as some believed. He urged the necessity of organization by agricultural producers, asserting that only the farmer, among all working groups, was unorganized and therefore inarticulate.

Governor H. L. Whitfield, of Mississippi, at whose summons the conference assembled at the call of governors of cotton growing states, declared in opening the meeting that the interest manifested by "this distinguished gathering" was a guarantee that some action would be taken to relieve the distress of Southern business in general and cotton raisers in particular.

The resolutions committee by states included: Alabama—Edward O'Neal, Montgomery; Alan Northington, Mrs. W. B. Edmundson, Decatur.

A plea for increased consumption of cotton was entered by C. W. Linthicum, of Little Rock, secretary-treasurer of the Arkansas Wholesale Grocers Association. Mr. Linthicum called for the use of cotton sacks in place of jute sacks, which he spoke of as a British product.

Oscar Johnson, of Memphis, a member of the resolutions committee from Tennessee, outlined a plan for financing the present crop. He was followed by George Wilson, cotton planter and banker of Greenwood, Miss. He called for reduction in acreage planted to cotton and urged planters to seek credit through their co-operative associations.

He was removed to a local hospital and it is believed that he will survive, provided there are no complications.

ROGERS HORNSBY BURIES MOTHER

With Bat In His Hand
He Saw Father Die
25 Years Ago

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 13.—(AP)—A world's champion was just a home town boy, who had lost his dearest friend when Rogers Hornsby buried his mother today.

The plaudits of the multitude in the honor of a great triumph were dim and distant things as the manager of the victorious St. Louis Cardinals, world's series champions, stood beside the bier of the woman who had to leave before she learned of her son's success.

Sensing the personal emotions of the occasion, residents of Austin made no outward demonstration, but quietly as neighbors sympathizing with neighbor, passed by the coffin of Mrs. Hornsby.

In the home of his aunt Mrs. Knox Johnson, where his mother died just a few days before the world's series started, Hornsby rested from the labor of the baseball battle, while friends and relatives prepared to pay last tribute to the delicate mother who had given a strong son to sports.

It was Mrs. Hornsby's wish that her son remain with his team during the series.

Twenty-five years ago Rogers, clutching a baseball and bat, stood at the bedside of his dying father. His father, Ed Hornsby, had brought the son the toys a few days before. The father fell ill and sank rapidly. Rogers was playing in the yard with the ball and bat when his father took a turn for the worse. Mrs. Hornsby went to the yard and carried her boy to the sick bed. He still clutched the playthings, a prophetic act. She cried to her husband to look at their baby, but the father had lost consciousness. He died within a few hours.

This was one of the incidents in the life of the Cardinal manager, related today by his aunt, Mrs. H. C. Scheerer. The funeral will be held late today.

Smith Discusses Cotton Situation

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—(AP)—The cotton situation was discussed with President Coolidge today by Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, who expressed the opinion the present crop could be financed with aid extended through the federal reserve system, particularly if the Southern cotton states agreed to a cut in acreage.

Senator Smith arranged to place his views before the special committee appointed by the President to assist the cotton states.

Morgan County Is Large Area

The statement made today by Deputy Sheriff Ben Poole that "Morgan county is a big county," was substantiated with figures from the tax assessors office. United States Cash Is Backing The Canadian Liquor Traffic

Feature Writer Finds That Smuggling Is A Business Requiring An Intense And Well Systemitized Organization.

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH

WASHINGTON.—Rum running has been developed to its highest pitch of efficiency on the Detroit five, section of the Canadian border, according to federal dry officials. This "sector" of the rum war front is regarded as the government's most serious problem in stopping up the inward flow of foreign liquors.

The Canadian Rum trust, backed probably by American capital and manned chiefly by Americans, has developed a distribution machine in that district comparable to that of the big industries.

On the Canadian side are numerous liquor warehouses connected to the river by canals. Leading to the warehouses are railroad spur tracks furnishing direct communication from the Canadian liquor centers.

The "trust" has erected a number of boat houses on the American side of the river to house liquor smuggled over the border.

The dash from Canada to United States requires three to five minutes, according to the speed of the boat.

Liquor Stores Safe
The liquor stores thus placed on American soil are safe from molestation by the government excepting through the use of search warrants, extremely difficult to obtain unless evidence of sale is furnished. Liquor is never sold from boat houses, but taken to Detroit or other markets by automobile.

"Government agents have the best opportunity to grab the smugglers on the river, but even that chance is extremely thin," a prohibition official said.

"The Detroit river district is the scene of probably the greatest activity of rum runners" for an area of the size. Just how much whiskey and beer goes through this section nobody can guess but the volume is extremely heavy."

The Detroit river sector was first handled by the prohibition unit or the land army of the government in the rum war. Later it was transferred to the control of the customs service, but subsequently sent back to the dry prohibition administrator for Ohio and Michigan.

Billed to "Mexico"
Officials explained that liquor is shipped to the Canadian border on freight cars billed "for Mexico." These shipments are entirely legal under the Canadian law and even operations of the liquor treaty between Canada and the United States cannot improve the situation.

Another danger one on the Canadian border is in the vicinity of Niagara Falls. A considerable volume of liquor crosses Lake Ontario in fast motor boats. Smuggling is fairly general on the northern New York border where the runners concentrate on furnishing a supply of beer and ale to the American trade.

Thousands of automobiles have been captured by the customs service in Northern New York in the last few months. Most of them are employed by the customs and prohibition authorities in the battle against smugglers.

The Florida district is still giving the government considerable trouble. M. O. Dunning, collector of customs at Savannah, Ga., and prohibition czar of the Southeast is making a good record having captured a greater number of motorboats and schooners.

Winter Operations

During the winter smugglers operating with the Bahama Islands and Cuba as bases rushed liquor to the American shore almost daily. Probably fifty percent of the smugglers got by the coast patrol owing to lack of facilities for guarding the coast.

Smugglers, officials explained, had the "whole east Coast to shoot at," and in addition they sent many of their liquor ships around to the West Coast of Florida where big bases hidden in the swamps formed a refuge for the rum runners and their wares until it could be delivered to the markets.

Smugglers are continuing their liquor running on the Northeastern Coast of United States, where a scattered rum row has lurked for several years. A heavy concentration of Coast Guard cutters, ever, has held smuggling in this district to a minimum.

PARIS.—Hats are by no means out of fashion, quite to the contrary, only the shape and length have been changed, as everything else Milady wears. The smartest ones are now of crystal made in the shape of two paddles joined with a narrow band of jet. Some times they are of clear crystal, sometimes opaque and very often a combination of the two. They are designed to hold in place the folds of the new soft high-crowned felt or velvet hats.

Earrings are also always in fashion. The very latest ones are designed to be worn with the ever-popular slave-bracelets. They have an imitation gem, sapphire, ruby or emerald matching those in the bracelet, set between long narrow gold links, also corresponding to those of the bracelet and are very becoming to those who can wear the long carrying.

The newest garters seen in a specialty shop come of narrow blue silk elastic with a finely-pleated trim of maline of the same shade which has a row of tiny silver paillettes or sequin along the edge.

Other garters come of a narrow velvet ribbon which has a big circle of ostrich feathers of the same shade and a doll's head in the center.

Two new envelope bags have recently appeared. One is in velvet, in red, blue or white, heavily-embroidered in an all-over design of pearl beads with here and there a sparkling rhinestone. The other is of stripes of gold kid and white. Women's belt of heavy red leather with a small mother-of-pearl buckle are very smart to wear with the sweater or sports suit and are even worn with the new fur sports coat.

PARIS.—At first sight the new evening-gowns all look as if they were made on straight simple lines. Some appear to be almost tubular but they are really not as simple as they look and are much more complicated than last season's evening wear.

Draperies, tiered skirts, decorated ends, fringes, jeweled embroidery, paillettes, metal from gold to platinum and alliances of materials, particularly georgette and panne, or the new mousseline velvet—all help to make a change. Many of the new models appear longer because of the fringes, draperies and uneven hemlines, but they really are just as short and as becoming as ever.

The new evening-gowns are gorgeous chez Redfern, gold and red playing an important role, but there are also lovely new greens and blues and charmingly simple white and gold frocks for the younger set. Ostrich trimmings on dinner and dance frocks are daintier than ever. Satin and chiffon evening make the general rule here.

Taffeta leads for Jeanne Lanvin's evening gowns, for she is still partial to the charming youthful robe de style with the very full bouffant skirt and quaint, round-necked waist. In pale pink or blue with alternating ruffles of both colors, with a touch of silver around the neck or at the edge of the ruffles, they are exceedingly lovely. After taffeta comes georgette, chiffon or a simple embroidered robe.

Lucile is making a lovely evening gown of pink georgette with a wide band of silver lace just above the normal waist-line and layers of finely-pleated frills on the skirt. There is also one in her favorite combination of pale blue and pink. A charming black chiffon is made over pink with a wide velvet ribbon going around the neck and down the front of the bodice tying in a long bow just below the waist-line.

Officials of Pan-American Co. Here For Short Business Trip Over Cities

H. G. Parkhurst
Assistant
General Manager

H. G. Parkhurst, of New Orleans, assistant general manager of the Pan-American Petroleum company, and director of Southern operations for the company, together with State Manager McCrory, of Birmingham, are visitors in the Twin Cities for a short business trip. The Pan-American Petroleum company entered the South several months ago, announcing at the time its intention to spend $10,000,000 in Alabama alone in acquiring sites for wholesale and retail stations and in establishing these stations at strategic points in the state.

The Twin Cities were awarded one of the "break bulk" stations, distributing the products of the company not only to this immediate territory, but to adjacent territory as well.

Corn Borer To Force Farmers To Find New Harvest Method

By ROBERT W. GINBURG
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

INDIANAPOLIS.—Another decade will see the entire corn belt using a different method of harvesting their crops, Frank N. Wallace, Indiana State Entomologist believes.

The revolution in method will be necessitated by the advance of the European corn borer, which Wallace says, will be over the entire Middle West within the next ten years.

The pest invaded this state this year, sweeping in on the northeast winds from the Ohio section infested around the region of Lake Erie. Several counties in the northeast part of the state have been quarantined as a result.

The method by which the corn borer lives, Wallace says, is making it necessary for farmers to devise some method by which they will be able to harvest their crop, and at the same time absolutely destroy all the fodder.

A new machine is now being devised that will cut the corn stalks almost even with the ground. It will take the stalk through a set of jaws, shredding it but squeezing the ears of corn out of their husks.

To Burn Fodder
The fodder then will be burned or plowed under, Wallace says, resulting in the death of the borers and destroying them to a great extent.

But with all the new machinery, Wallace thinks that it will be necessary to continue their use entirely after the borer once infects a given area. He says there is nothing that can stop the advance and spread of the pest after it once gets a foothold.

As proof of his contention, he cites the conditions in Canada and the eastern states, where the borer has been prevalent and continues to do untold damage to the crops yearly.

The worst thing about the spread of the borer, Wallace says, is the columns of publicity given the advent of the pest into any given community.

"They scare the farmer to death," he says, "and when they go out into their fields and don't find any serious damage the first year, they laugh at us for yelling 'wolf'."

The second year comes around, according to Wallace, and still there is no appreciable amount of damage done to the crop, and the farmer feels convinced that he has been "worked" for some reason or other, and utterly disregards all advice given him.

The next year, there will be a few stalks of corn fall over during some windstorm, and the farmer will pay little attention to it. He will not realize that the borer is beginning to do its deadly work, Wallace says.

The Pest Increases
By the next time he plants his crops, the pest will be so thoroughly entrenched on his premises that the crop will be damaged 30 or 40 per cent and then he will lose money, the entomologist says.

By that time, with favorable winds, the moths will have gone far, and a new area will have been infected, bringing thousands of dollars damage to the crops of other men.

Wallace says he dreads to think of the time when the corn borer will reach the southern part of the United States. At the present time the moths are single brooded, but when they reach warmer climates, he is afraid that they will become two brooded, and make the checking of damage done by them almost impossible.

WONDERS WILL NEVER CEASE

Says Ensley Woman In Speaking of the Results She Obtained From the Use of the Wonderful Remedy, Herb Juice

"I think it is just wonderful how quickly your remarkable remedy, Herb Juice, has changed my badly rundown condition to that of a hale and hearty woman, and in such a remarkably short time," said Mrs. W. E. McBride, who resides at 1711 Jefferson Avenue, Ensley, Ala., in a recent conversation with the representative of the Herb Juice Medicine Company. "Out of all the remedies which I have taken for constipation, nervous and run-down condition," continued Mrs. McBride, "I have never had the pleasure of experiencing such wonderful results from anything as I have from your Wonderful Herb Juice. I have been constipated for years and as I grow older this condition seemed to grow worse, and in later years I have suffered intensely from dizziness and bilious attacks. As I said before, I was very nervous at times, could not sleep or rest well, lost strength and weight. Of course I, like everyone else, took most everything I could hear of for these ailments, but without scarcely any results at all. I kept going down hill all the time. At last I saw the advertisements of the local people who had taken this great remedy with such splendid results, that I decided to try it myself, and I must confess that I have never seen anything work so wonderfully as this great medicine has in my case. It has completely destroyed that constipated condition from which I suffered so long. I never have any more of those dizzy spells or bilious attacks. It has just simply made a new woman out of me, built me up in every way and I feel so much better than I did before taking this medicine. I now have a splendid appetite, sleep peacefully, have lots of energy, have gained ten pounds in weight and much strength. I know your wonderful remedy is worthy of the highest praise and I gladly recommend it to everyone."

This great laxative medicine is an herbal preparation known as Herb Juice, and is the biggest selling medicine on the market where it is known.

first ten days of this month over first ten days of October last year

H. R. Speake and practically all other Albany-Decatur merchants, reported unusually good business in October of last year, which makes the above gain of 81 per cent even more astounding.

Behind such tremendous gains, there must be some magnetic force that is drawing to H. R. Speake increasing numbers of men and boys, and women who shop for them.

what do these gains prove?

They prove the truthfulness of H. R. Speake's advertising. They prove that H. R. Speake DOES give greater values. They prove that all you have read over H. R. Speake's signature about seeking profit through volume—less profit per sale, but more sales—is dyed-in-the-wool truth. They prove the merchandise in H. R. Speake's store is right in quality, right in style, and in ample variety to meet varied preferences. They prove to us that our small-profit policy is well-founded. They prove to you that H. R. Speake's IS the store of greater value.

If you are not now sharing in the benefits of H. R. Speake's small-profit, big-volume policy, isn't it time you investigated?

We've stuck to quality we can and do guarantee, but lowered the price, seeking our profit through volume.

THE GOAL IS IN SIGHT, NOW IS THE TIME FOR THE WINNING GUN.

Albany-Decatur in the future.

That sentence is sufficient to cause citizens to halt a long time, wondering, groping, guessing, thinking. And it is not unnatural that citizens will grope, for there are none who know the future. There are those, however, who can predict and who can summarize conditions prevailing in other sections and apply those same conditions to the Albany-Decatur section.

The writer speaks of the present drive for funds to bring a great plant into the midst, employing those legions of the unemployed, filling the vacant houses now unoccupied here, releasing a payroll that adds the difference in a small town and a large town. Most of the readers of these columns are familiar with the project, others who are not familiar owe it to themselves that they have not taken sufficient interest to find out what is going on under their noses for there have been three mass meetings for the purpose of acquainting the public with what is underway for these cities.

As this is written the hour is not far away for the final report of committeemen, the final answer of the Twin Cities to the proposal which has been laid upon the table. The cards are face up, our had has been called and unless we come through with a full house then there is going to be plenty of time to talk to neighbor upon the street corner and explain why you believe business conditions are dull.

The responsibility for this project as usual lies with the business people, the salaried man, the man of little capital. Unfortunately, such is the condition in nearly every small city, until things are put on a footing and the others have been shown that there is a difference in fly-by-night schemes and honest business enterprise, enterprise which spells growth for the cities of Albany and Decatur.

This is our last chance, either we can put up at this moment, or we will not have the opportunity for sharing in a wonderful civic prospect within the coming week. There will be no waiting, others are clamoring for the same job we have undertaken and they will not hesitate to do their part once they are told to go ahead.

People, the first real opportunity for Albany-Decatur has arrived, unless there is an immediate reply from these cities then there are grave fears that such a proposal will not be made again within this generation. We cannot afford to let our dollars lie idle when there is so much good to be done for these communities. Get into line now, do your share in making these cities all that they should be, see some growth here before the time comes when you can serve no more, offer your children something aside from a hard job of civic building. It's action and money we need right now, not questioning.

VIRGINIAN COMES ACROSS ON THE BOND ISSUE PLAN.

There are those among Alabamians who remember the tremendous controversy raging about August 10 upon bonds or no bonds, politically speaking. There were those who declared the bond issue unsound, others who declared $75,000,000 was too much, others in the minority who favored the plan for a big bond issue for the reason they hoped to see Alabama with a system of roads equal to that of any state in the Union. That political campaign is done, but good roads remain an issue. The bond issue will continue to crop up from time to time and there are adherents of the issue plan who will enjoy reading the following opinion of a former opponent to the bond issue idea. Those who oppose at this time will doubtless read for the value of the expert opinion.

The article which is reproduced below is taken from a current issue of the Manufacturers Record and was written by Oliver J. Sands, president of the American National Bank, Richmond. He has this to say with reference to a $120,000,000 bond issue for the state of Virginia:

"Recently, in a public interview, I proposed that the time was now propitious for the state of Virginia to make contracts for an early completion of its road system.
"Having opposed a long-time bond issue for the construction of roads, it is quite natural that I should be asked why I now favor borrowing money for this purpose when I opposed it previously. To those who were acquainted with general conditions, industrial, financial and otherwise, in 1923 and the conditions that exist today, no further reason should be necessary. Conditions at that time as to agricultural production, cost of commodities, value of the farmer's dollar uncertainty as to financial future were undetermined and such that the undertaking of large public work with borrowed funds appeared to me to be unwise.

"In addition to general conditions, there were several local reasons that induced me to oppose a long-time bond issue for the construction of roads at that time. The revenue applicable for the purpose was not nearly so large and well determined as it is at this time, and we did not have the same system under which road construction was carried on as we have at present, and we were not so well organized nor experienced to carry on road work of large proportions as we are today.

"There never was and never could have been any doubt in my mind, or that of anyone who has had the least opportunity of studying economic principles and the application of those principles, in the soundness of the plan involved in issuing securities in anticipation of revenues for the carrying out of any great undertaking, especially when the undertaking had an assured income or revenue sufficient to discharge the indebtedness and its interest within a fixed period, which period should not be longer than the productive life of the property, upon which the bonds rely for their security and payment. Since the tax upon gasoline has been increased by the legislature, and since we know from our own experience and the added experience of other states that the revenue received from this source provides a fixed and increasing income, growing in proportion to the number of miles of road available, we can now, without any question of doubt, calculate to a certainty as to the time when we can pay without danger of additional levies or taxes of any character being laid upon any of our people. Until the present moment we have not been in a position to do this with the same degree of certainty as at present.

"We have now completed a sufficient number of miles of modern roads for our people to realize the inestimable value of good roads to all the people. We are having an increasing pressure for the construction of sections of the road in priority to other sections. This is creating embarrassment and possibly hard feelings and prevents a united effort upon the part of all the people for the upbuilding of the whole state.

"With an available revenue of $10,500,000 per annum, which sum is increasing with every additional gallon of gasoline that is sold; with the road system now well planned and organized and a legitimate demand from every section for its entire completion; with the cost of completion determined at a sum not to exceed $120,000,000; with the positive knowledge that much money can be saved by giving larger contracts at one time, and with the knowledge that the sale of securities can now be accomplished upon advantageous terms without any danger of disarranging other important business undertakings, throughout the country, and that labor can be secured without seriously affecting the productive necessities of the country, there appears to be every reason why the legislature should now authorize the issuance of short-time certificates from time to time in a sum necessary to carry to immediate completion every foot of road which has been adopted as part of the general system of state roads. It would be necessary to have outstanding at any one time only a small part of the $120,000,000 total needed, possibly $25,000,000, or not exceeding $50,000,000 of certificates that would be the maximum outstanding at any time, and no certificate would have to be issued for a period longer than five or six years; the rate of interest should not exceed 4 per cent. The additional revenues from the finished roads on account of the increased tax on gasoline would undoubtedly pay the interest on the total amount of outstanding certificates, and the people would have the advantages of a completed road system in an average period of six or seven years earlier than they would under the present system.

"I maintain that conditions now are not comparable with the conditions existing when this matter was previously considered and that there is no reasonable or legitimate excuse for further delaying the completion of the road system of Virginia.

"A distinguished economist, Guy M. Walker, has published within the last few days an article on the development of good roads and farmers, in which he says:

"Installment buying in the automobile field has had more to do with the increase of wealth in the United States in the past ten years than almost any other single thing, because the widespread use of automobiles and automobile trucks and busses is at the bottom of the enormous development of permanent and high-class roads. The farmers of the country would never have taxed themselves to secure the good roads that have been built past their farms in response to the demands of users of automobiles. But although the farmers have had little to do with the development of good roads, these good roads have added enormously to the accessibility and to the value of the farming lands, that have been reached by the good roads, and further than that they have so reduced the cost to the farmer of reaching the cities and towns, which are his markets, that they have added largely to the value of his farm products and to the rewards that have come to the farmer from everything that he raises. And at the present time the maintenance of these roads is largely being taxed not to the farmers, who benefit from them so enormously, but to the automobile users of the roads through the gasoline tax levied on them through their consumption of it."

People, this bond issue idea is coming to Alabama again some day and it will not cause Alabamians any lost motion to be thinking now of the value of their ballots, once the plan is placed before the voter for the sanction of an Alabama public, eager to make a step forward.

CLEANLINESS A FACTOR IN COMMON AILMENT

Hemorrhoids May Be Relieved by Bathing and Use of Ointments But Many Sound Treatments for Permanent Cure Are Available.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONE of the most common and disagreeable of all the simple ailments is known to the laity as "piles." The doctors call the trouble "hemorrhoids." But no matter what name is applied to the condition, it is annoying, at least, and may be extremely painful.

Not always is it the case that itching and smarting of the rectum are due to piles. There may be a trifling irritation of the skin in that region, which is kept inflamed and disturbed from the lack of cleanliness.

This part of the body should be carefully washed with soap and water, once a day, certainly, and, better still, twice a day. Cleanliness will do wonders in promoting comfort.

The dense network of nerves and blood vessels found in this region makes it a natural place for some disturbance. If the circulation of the blood is sluggish and the habits of life are sedentary, hemorrhoids are liable to appear.

Constipation is apt to be the first one of a train of symptoms which ends in rectal trouble. Straining at stool helps to develop piles.

The painful sensations and the bleeding are common symptoms of the disease. In advanced cases the lumps and swellings become so great as to cause protrusion of tissue from the rectum.

In the treatment of piles there are local remedies of great value. Such applications contain soothing, healing and astringent ingredients.

I know such a "cure" which, for several generations, has been used in a family of my acquaintance. Of course, it is too much to think any given remedy will cure every case of a given disease. But, as regards piles, there is no doubt that the relief of constipation, together with the application of a well selected local agent, will do wonders in bringing about a cure.

Your doctor will tell you what to use for local relief. He may have his favorite remedy, and if he turns to the doctor books for suggestions he will find a great array of prescriptions. As one writer says, "The treatment of hemorrhoids is a matter of Hippocrates, the Father of Medicine, was born."

In a recently printed work on medicine I found no less than fourteen different pile ointments recommended. The doctor books for suggestions and the doctor books for suggestions will find a great array of prescriptions. As one writer says, "The treatment of hemorrhoids is a matter of Hippocrates, the Father of Medicine, was born."

But regardless of the local remedy used, bear in mind that cleanliness is of first importance. Careful bathing will do much to relieve the annoying symptoms of rectal trouble.

National Guard Is Using U. S. Goods

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 13.—(AP)—The Alabama National Guard is now using federal military property valued at $1,787,099.92. This fact is shown by the annual audit of government property completed by Lieut. L. E. Edwards, of the finance department, of the U. S. army, after an investigation of two weeks. After the completion of the audit, Lieut. Edwards said that he found the accounts well kept and in excellent condition. Because of the condition of the records he was able to finish the examination in less than the allotted time.

The audit covered all military property in use in the state. After it was issued to Alabama by the War Department it was re-issued by the state military department and an inspection of the 60 accounts was necessary. The observation squadrons of the air service has the greatest amount of federal army property to account for, the value reaching $185,000, while the smallest amount is held by the rifle companies, the value being $13,500 issued to each unit.

OVERHEAD IN SCHOOLS

This is the second of a series of articles on overhead cost in the schools by R. W. Cowart, Secretary of the Alabama Education Association.

In commenting on the cost of overhead in the schools, Mr. Cowart, Secretary of the Alabama Education Association, said: "Probably the hue and cry raised about the cost of overhead in our schools is due largely to a lack of understanding of the services purchased by this expenditure. A thorough appreciation of the services rendered by school superintendents and boards of education would, no doubt, lead to the conclusion that the money so invested is entirely justifiable and indeed profitable.

"Overhead costs in schools it, briefly, all the costs of services of boards of education, superintendents and their assistants, attendance officers, census enumeration, the costs of stenographic and clerical help in these office, and office supplies.

"These executive officers serve as the connecting link between the community and the schools. They are charged with the entire management of the schools and held responsible for results. These executives have to plan the wise expenditure of all money entrusted to them. Every penny of the public school fund comes under their observation. With only thirty-six cents to do the job of a dollar, they must be exceedingly judicious in their expenditures. They have to secure all teachers. To seek these teachers, examine into their qualifications, and finally, to select the best qualified that funds will permit, require no small amount of time and carefully directed effort. Over 15,000 teachers have to be employed annually.

"There are buildings to be built, under the planning and supervision of these officers. There is night murdered John O. Niblett and his brother, Gracie L. Niblett, in their home near Sprague's Junction.

"Variety," Paramount's European sensation, which comes to the Princess tomorrow, smashed all box office records when shown at the giant Ufa Palace in Berlin, Germany. Every seat in the big house was occupied throughout the picture's run, and a special police detail was on duty at all times.

On the opening night, it was to believe our foreign brothers of the press, the audience went wild with enthusiasm. There were countless outbreaks of applause for the stars, Emil Jannings and beautiful Lya DePutti. And it is said that both Director Dupont and Photographer Carl Freund had to take more than a dozen curtain calls.

Mrs. Insull's 'One-Woman Theatre Guild'

MRS. SAMUEL

INSULL has been "shopping" in New York for talent for her Chicago playhouse, and now it is possible to reveal some of her plans for the season of the only "one-woman theatre guild" in the world.

Mrs. Insull, wife of the multi-millionaire Chicago public utilities magnate, has the eyes of all theatredom on her in her unique experiment.

Three decades ago, Gladys Wallis, she was a star of the Broadway stage. When she returned to the footlights last year, after twenty-seven years of married life, touring in "The School for Scandal," in which she played Lady Teazle, she achieved an artistic success. On the heels of it came the announcement that this year, Mrs. Insull will have her own theatre in Chicago.

Fresh facts as to why and how that step was taken have recently come out. It is said one primary motive was Mr. Insull's objection to his wife touring again this season, though he is quite in sympathy with her stage ambitions. An attempt was made to organize a theatrical guild in Chicago, like New York's, and to take over the great Northern Hippodrome for its productions. When this idea proved not feasible, the Chicago attorneys, Schuyler, Ettelson & Weinfeld, opened negotiations for the Insulls to take over the Studebaker Theatre on Michigan Boulevard.

In that building the first American "little theatre" experiments were tried. The house was found to be admirably suited to Mrs. Insull's plans. No cost was allowed to stand in her way. The law firm rented the Studebaker from the Chapin Estate for ten years at $90,000, the lease beginning September, 1927. Then the lease for 1926 was bought from Frank A. P. Gazzola for a premium of $60,000 more.

A clause of the lease from the Chapin estate, specifying that only productions meeting with approval of the trustees shall be shown at the Studebaker, will not hamper Mrs. Insull.

The "one woman guild," for it is understood Mrs. Insull will direct PARIS.—"Poor Man's Sauce" is a good one for autumn game or any kind of meat.

Put into casserole four spoonsful of shallot and onions finely minced. Add a laurel-leaf and a pinch of garlic. Let brown with a little butter or oil.

Add a bit of flour and let cook a minute, moistening with the juice from the fowl or meat.

Simmer ten or twelve minutes on the edge of the stove. Remove the garlic and laurel-leaf and add a dash of parsley and pepper.

PARIS.—For "Eggs a la Royale" put four whole ones with one pint milk. Add salt and pepper.

Butter six little porcelain cups. Chop one-fourth pound of ham into fine pieces. Pour in the egg mixture, not entirely filling the cups. Cook over boiling water for twenty or thirty minutes.

Remove from the molds and serve with spinach a la creme.

CHRYSLER "70"

New Lower Prices—

Presenting a New Influence on all Motoring for Years to Come

Newer, more distinctive silhouette—
Newer, more exquisitely graceful bodies—
Newer, exclusive style of military front and cinder visor on enclosed models—
Newer luxury of comfort with deeper and softer cushions—
Newer, greater riding ease, with exclusive no-side-sway vanadium springs, Watson stabilizers and extra-size full balloon tires, mounted on newly-designed smaller wheels—
Newer richness of interior upholstery. Finer hardware and fittings with a handsome clock added to the newly beautified instrument panel—
Newer refinements in controls and headlamps—
Newer, more attractive blendings in body tones, with newer and subtler harmonies in stripings and panelings.

Again, with the new, finer Chrysler "70", Chrysler creates a distinctive departure in design and a new measure of value for an industry to follow. Today, while attempts are still made to match the first

Chrysler standards of performance and symmetry originated three years ago, the new, finer Chrysler "70" excels the charm and smartness of its older self, just as that older self relegated the earlier conceptions of motor car beauty and performance to oblivion.

With its new vibrant beauty, joined to energetic and vigorous performance, unapproached economy, proved dependability and long life—at prices which register a distinct enhancement of motor car value—the new, finer Chrysler "70" leaves today's trend as far behind as the original "70" advanced the styles of three years ago.

Governor Starts Pruning Offices

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 13.—(AP)—Mrs. Ethel Hawley, formerly inspector of license for Jefferson county, has been removed from office by Governor W. W. Brandon who appointed J. L. Lunsford to succeed her.

Mrs. Hawley was named license inspector on the death of her husband. At the time, it was said, the position was tendered to Mr. Lunsford but he declined and requested that it go to Mrs. Lunsford. Afterwards Mr. Lunsford was made chief clerk of the bureau by Mrs. Hawley. The office of license inspector is said to be one of the best paying positions in Alabama.

After assuming office Mrs. Hawley, it is said, was requested to take only one-third of the receipts of the office and give the remaining two-thirds to Lunsford. She declined to do this and was requested by the tax commission to resign. After engaging counsel she learned that she was powerless and that the commission had power to discharge her without rhyme or reason. She therefore tendered her resignation.

It is reported that others in the state service will lose their offices before a great while.

It was said that Governor Brandon put the state on notice recently in a letter to Sam M. Adams, chairman of the Democratic executive committee of Chilton county, that he expects to stand by those who stood by him and that his appointees during the remaining days of his term will be selected from among those who followed his lead in the recent primary election.

Largest Crowds To Attend Pair Of Battles; Teams Practice Hard

The largest crowds of the year are going to attend the pair of games set for next Friday afternoon—Albany high against Lawrence county high—Decatur high against Morgan county high. Both games are scheduled for 3:30 o'clock the Albany game at Malone Park, the Decatur game at Riverside Park, just back of Decatur high school.

The teams are working feverishly in an attempt to get in the best possible condition for the coming games, realizing that much of their standing this year will be attributed to the result of the two games.

Morgan county high comes here with a light, fighting team, prepared to worry Decatur through the four long periods. The Moulton aggregation is not green in the least, has a driving power stimulated by veterans of several seasons. The home clubs are not fooled in the least in their duties for the coming Friday games.

Decatur high, while expected to play a highly defensive game will not be at a loss for an offense. A hard driving backfield is expected to go through Morgan county high forwards for consistent and substantial gains. Pete West will demonstrate some of his old time plunging ability and incidentally furnish the toe twist under punts necessary to keep Hartselle toes outdistanced. Decatur is going to be fighting in there from start to finish and the team looks forward confidently to the first win of the season.

Over on Malone Park lot there is going to be some more hectic action. Albany high is not off guard as the date for the melee nears. Considerable switching in the line and backfield may result with the loss of Stinson and the addition of Martin, Jackson and Garnett. The latter had has demonstrated some line driving power and may be used to batter away at the Moulton line. In such event it is likely that Henry Papenburg will be sent to his old position at an end Terry has been showing up some better in his battle for pivot honors and may possibly get the call as a starter. Thrasher, who played his first game last week at a tackle, will likely be moved into guard. Guyton having suffered an injury and likely to be out for another week. Wiggins is the other probable guard selection. In the event Garnett is placed in the backfield, then Bishop, Garnett, Perle and Thoms may do the starting at ball carrying chores. An unsettled condition yet remains in the backfield and Thoms may be placed on the reserve list, the line held intact and Henry Papenburg held at his backfield post.

High school students of both schools are elated over an offered opportunity to aid in the prospective victories, using their voices as a means of stimulation to their team representatives. Things look good for a pair of victories, but it is going to take driving power along the sidelines as well as on the field to bring home the coveted honor.

Talking yesterday with a reader of these columns there was considerable complimentary language spilled concerning the prediction of team wins and team scores for the battles of last Saturday. Being modest and retiring (bologna) the predicting artist reminded his admirer that his guesses were sometimes good guesses and that as the weeks wear on that there is likely to be found a great many inaccuracies. But after gazing at the Age-Herald this morning and finding that the sports editor of that newspaper did considerable hitting and missing himself, why things don't look so dull. Guess a try next week won't hurt, but there is one he luvva job to save a reputation with teams like Alabama and Georgia Tech facing each other and Tulane dropping into little old New York to take a look at Wall Street and incidentally take a crack at City College N. Y.

Veterans Return To Line For Fray In Atlanta

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Oct. 13.—Although Vanderbilt and Mississippi A. M. furnished as stiff opposition as one usually encounters, Alabama's Crimson Tide is looking for the battle of their young lives Saturday in Atlanta when they play Georgia Tech. It will be the fourth meeting of Tech and Alabama since Wallace Wade took charge of the Crimson.

Both outfits are undefeated within the conference. Alabama has beaten Vandy and A. M. and Tech has beaten V. M. I. and Tulane, the latter defeat having caused surprise and also caused the followers of Tech to look for greater things from the Atlantans. All four teams conquered were ranking teams of the conference and their elimination by the rivals of Saturday make Saturday's game all the more important to conference standing.

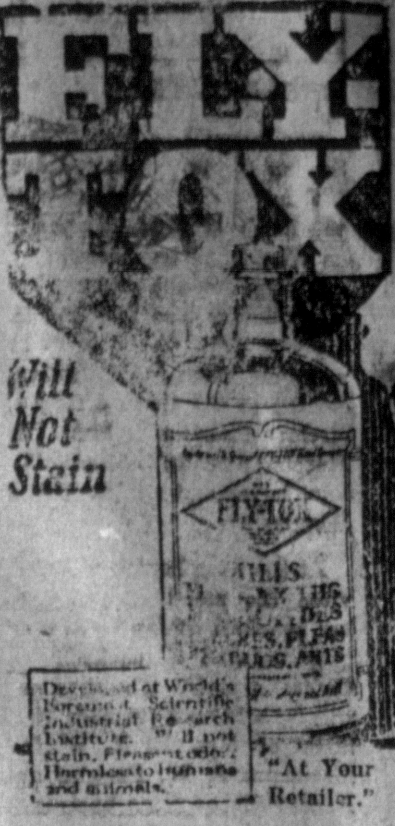

Alabama stock jumped some Monday when Holmes, the veteran center returned to practice. Holmes had an attack of appendicitis last week and it was thought for a time that an operation would be necessary. Roy Dismukes, a reserve guard who was operated on early in September for appendicitis, also donned a uniform Monday. Holmes is expected to start Saturday, but it is doubtful whether Dismukes has recovered sufficiently to play if Coach Wade deems to use him.

With Holmes back at center, Coach Wade will be able to hold "Babe" Pierce in reserve for any spot except end on the line. Pearce played center against the Aggies. He was used at guard and tackle against Vandy. In both games he gave a good account of himself for a sophomore. And the fact that the Crimson will have him in reserve lends more reserve strength to the Crimson.

Scrimmage against Tech formations featured the early work of the Tide this week. Also practice on the defense against passes has been done quite a bit. There's no doubt but what Alabama has been weak against passes in past games, and a real effort to improve this method of defense is being made by the Tide's coaches. The "Tech" of practice has been composed of good freshmen material mixed in with a few line-men.

The Crimson Tide will leave here Thursday night.

PARADISE

The launch ran alongside the jetty with the grace of a swan.

The expression in the eyes of his new and helpful acquaintance as he leaned forward to give his hand to the little lady opened up to Bill Quex a long story of jealousy and desire. "And I don't wonder," he said to himself, with instant appreciation. "A regular bit of old right, not 'alf she ain't." Born on the island of a Shoreditch mother, it was from her as well as from a Billingsgate father that he had caught his Cockney accent.

"This is immense," said Tony, characterizing the meeting and not the great hard hand which he grasped with his amazing trustfulness. "I expected to be about two days looking for you. My wife." He waved his hand towards Chrissie.

Seeing in the island a haven of refuge and in this enormous person a bodyguard for Tony, Chrissie recovered from her shock at the sight of his insalubrious garments. "I'm very glad to meet you," she said.

Quex had never seen any eyes of quite that shade of blue, any face so like an English flower, any figure so small and so appealing. He made another bow. It would have thrown all Paradise into panic.

And then Sherwood jumped quickly. Things were shaping well. "Mr. Quex was just suggesting, as far as I could gather, that if you sail at once, on his yawl—that's the one, out there—you can get to the island before sundown and fish those deeds up while the light hangs out."

"That's so," said Quex, answering quickly to his cue. "But as there ain't much wind, we'd better nip right in." He loaded himself with baggage and lopped along to the boat. "If you're going to do it, get it done," was his motto.

"A great idea," said Tony, somehow not in the least surprised at this coincidental meeting. Always things had gone like this for him since Chrissie had brought him luck. "Quex obviously is a man of action. Well then, Teddy, as soon as I know how things are and where to put you up and all that, I'll get one tame giant to sail us to the yacht. Then we'll act as pilot and guide you to Paradise for as long a stay as you like. Meaning, old boy, I can't find words sufficiently to thank you for performing this miracle. All I can say is that Chrissie and I will never forget your kindness as long as we live, even if that brings us to the time when we are the last remaining King and Queen on earth."

"Very glad, old man," said Sherwood. "In spite of everything, I'm your friend, you know."

Tony picked up the two remaining suit cases, one of which contained all Chrissie's things. With these, and with dancing eyes, he followed Quex to the rowboat, singing, "Oh, here I come with my little lot." He was as happy as on the day when war had been declared.

And so, once again, Chrissie was alone with Teddy Sherwood. "I can find words," she said, giving him her hand. "Thank you, Teddy. May you find a better girl than me in London."

The blood mounted to Sherwood's head so that he could hardly see. He alone knew the agony that he had suffered in being so close to her on the Isis and yet so desperately far away. And now she was going out of his sight, until such time as Quex had dealt with the interloper. And anything or anybody to take us there. Unless, he thought, "this heavyweight ex-prize fighter is on the lookout for a job."

Chrissie was far too honest to join in the persuasion. It was her great hope that she and Tony might never see Teddy Sherwood again.

It was not without an effort that Sherwood was able to achieve a casual tone. "But there won't be any need for you to go to the hotel," he said.

"Won't there?" Then here was a disruption of Tony's plans.

"Why?" Chrissie had held that in the hotel there would have been a certain amount of safety.

"Well," said Sherwood, "through what is to me a very happy accident, though no doubt to Chrissie it comes under the heading of 'man's'—he could now afford to be heavily playful with it—word—you can go straight from here to your island without any hindrance."

Tony was astounded and delighted. "What? Where is the island? How do you know we can?"

"Let me introduce Mr. Quex," said Sherwood, thoroughly enjoying himself, "the son of the man, no longer with us, whom your father left in charge."

Tony wheeled round.

Whereupon, bearing in mind the injunction to be tactful, Bill Quex raised his filthy old pith helmet. Not even the oldest of his cowed, detesting and brow-beaten natives had ever seen their despotic foe so amazing an imitation of a good-natured grin.

"Great Scott!" said Tony. "Is this—is this true?"

Chrissie had been brought up among caretakers—widows who camped in the basements of empty houses and elderly men who got up at night to sit before brasiers in front of new buildings or the wreckage of old ones—but never one like this huge mass of man with his semi-familiar leer, that careless shirt and those antiquated trousers which bore the lengthy story of activities on land and sea. In all her youthful experience, caretakers were respectable people.

"Revolution," corrected Pollock, with the dawning of one who was not, and never would have been, her husband. "Ask Sherwood when he comes. Well, as this is the hour when the daily cycle of vitality takes its most depressing dip, a whisky and soda is the tonic I prescribe. Coming, Lumley?"

"I am," said Lady George.

BETTING ON HALL-MILLS CASE
OVERSHADOWS WORLD SERIES
AND PRIZE FIGHT, SAYS WRIGHT

Betting on the Hall-Mills murder trial according to E. R. Wright, popular manager of the Albany Silk Mill who is now visiting various eastern points, overshadowed the Dempsey-Tunney prize fight and even the world series, so far as New Brunswick, N. J., was concerned.

Mr. Wright wrote a very interesting letter today concerning the world series games, having had the pleasure of seeing several of the games including the last game played at New York which St. Louis won, miraculously. Mr. Wright declared that the fly which Meusel missed and thus gave impetus to St. Louis chances, ought to have been caught by any 16-year old school girl. Speaking of Babe Ruth, the Albany-Decatur man found that the Battering Ramblino is the idol of all New York and "owns all of New York." He told of Haines failure to pitch to the Babe after the Sultan of Swat had hit a homer in the last game of the series.

Sends Clipping
Showing the intense interest felt in Somerville, N. J., and in New Brunswick, N. J., concerning the Hall-Mills murder trial, in which four defendants are faced with murder charges, the following clipping is taken from the Graphic Staff correspondent.

By JACK MILEY
Graphic Staff Correspondent
SOMERVILLE, N. J., Oct. 13.—With the approach of the Hall-Mills murder trials, this town and New Brunswick, noted for their indifference to Dempsey-Tunney speculation and World's Series betting, are feverishly enmeshed in a new gambling craze.

Residents are wagering their money on the fate of Mrs. Frances Hall, Willie Stevens, Henry dela B. Carpenter and Henry Stevens when the four defendants face a jury next month.

New Brunswick, habitat of the Hall and Stevens clans for generations, is rabidly pro-Hall. A word in favor of the prosecution is less majestic in the eyes of residents.

Willie Long Shot to Escape
In Somerville and adjoining towns, however, are many who favor Senator Simpson's chances of obtaining at least one conviction, merely as a sound gambling proposition.

Last night Willie Stevens was a 10-1 bet in New Brunswick future books to escape conviction. His mental deficiency, bettors declare, will influence the jury.

Henry Carpenter, Mrs. Hall's cousin, is listed as a 4-1 shot to escape with conviction in a slight degree. Carpenter is held at 2-1 for complete acquittal.

Strangely enough, Mrs. Hall and her brother, Henry Stevens, are held at 5 to 1 against absolute exoneration. That the jury will find them at least partially responsible is an even wager with the local gamblers.

Full-o-PEP

When the day's work is done

YES, sir, I actually feel fine when the day's work is done. It's a fact! I am just full of 'pep' until it's time to go to bed.

"I may be getting along in years, but, believe me, I am young in red blood! That's the whole secret of vitality, too-rich, red blood. I know—because I used to be completely worn out about 5 P. M. Began to think I was slipping.

"But do you know I found out the whole trouble with me was my blood. It needed building up. That was why I tired out so easily.

"So I went right to work building up red blood in my system with S. S. S. It built it up in a hurry, too. S. S. S. helps Nature build red-blood-cells so fast that I could feel my strength come back and the years just seemed to roll off of me.

"Whenever I see anybody now who seems worn-out by work, I tell them about S. S. S. It will surely put you back where you can enjoy life. S. S. S. makes you look better, too. Clears up your skin—increases your appetite—puts firm, solid flesh on you—and drives rheumatism right out of your body.

"You begin taking S. S. S. and begin living again. It will do it for you!" S. S. S. is sold by all drug stores. Get the larger bottle, it's more economical.

Carl Hagenbeck-Great
Wallace Circus

A society horse show, the equal of that presented in the big cities, is one of the features of the Carl Hagenbeck-Great Wallace Circus, which comes to Albany-Decatur in an afternoon and night performance on Saturday Oct. 16.

One of the most startling of innovations in tented amusements will be the presentation of a true English fox-hunt in which a score of hunters and huntresses, garbed in the hunt colors, red and white, will follow a large pack of thoroughbred Walker Hounds, which pick up the trail or scent left by six highly trained foxes. The horses that take part in the hunt have been thoroughly schooled and are able to clear the bars at almost unbelievable heights.

The Hagenbeck-Wallace management asserts that in "Porter," "Maid-of-the-Mist" and "Atta Boy," they have three of the best jumping horses in the world. "Maid-of-the-Mist" clears the bars at approximately seven feet, while "Porter" is the champion liberty jumping horse. "Atta Boy" is the only broad jumping horse now before the public. The high jumps and the hunting scene follow the high school number, in which a score of Kentucky thoroughbreds are put through a routine of difficult feats by young lady riders.
